How the Specter of Communism is Ruling our World

From the Editorial Board of "Nine Commentaries on the Communist Party"

Chapter Two Communism's European Beginnings

Many of the prophecies foretold in orthodox religions have come to pass, as have the predictions made by Nostradamus and those passed down in cultures around the world, from Peru to Korea, in Chinese history, from the Han to the Ming dynasties, there have been surprisingly accurate prophetic texts.

These prophecies show us the important truth that history is not a coincidental process, but rather a drama in which the sequence of major events has been pre-established. In the end times, which also could herald the beginning of a new historical cycle, all of the world's religions are awaiting one thing: the arrival of the Creator in the human realm.

All dramas have a climax. Though the devil has made arrangements to destroy humankind, the Creator has means of awakening the world's people, helping them to escape the devil's bondage, and offering them salvation. The ultimate battle between good and evil is unfolding today.

Orthodox religions the world over have foretold that in the era of the Creator's return, the world would be awash with demons, abomination, and ominous events as humanity lost its moral restraints, this is the world today.

The state of degeneration we face today has been long in the making. It began hundreds of years ago, with the rise of its core driving forces: atheism and the deception of humanity. It was Karl Marx who created an ideology to encompass the deception in all its permutations, and it was Vladimir Lenin who put the theory into brutal practice.

Marx, however, was not an atheist. He was a Satanist and became the demon whose mission it was to prevent man from recognizing the Creator in the end times.

1. Karl Marx's Santanic Works

Marx published many books throughout his life, the best known being the 1848 Communist Manifesto and the three volumes of Das Kapital, published between 1867 and 1894. These works form the theoretical basis of the communist movement.

It is less widely known that over the course of his life, Marx turned over his soul to the devil and became its agent in the human realm. In his youth, Marx had been a devout Christian. He was an enthusiastic believer in God before he was overcome by his demonic transformation. In his early poem "Invocation of One in Despair," Marx wrote of his intent to take revenge on God:

So a god has snatched from me my all
In the curse and rack of Destiny.
All his worlds are gone beyond recall!
Nothing but revenge is left to me!
On myself revenge I'll proudly wreak,
On that being that enthroned Lord,
Make my strength a patchwork of what's weak,
Leave my better self without reward!
I shall build my throne high overhead,
Cold, tremendous shall its summit be.
For its bulwark - superstitious dread,
For its Marshall - blackest agony.

In a letter to his father, dated November 10, 1837, Marx described the changes he was experiencing: "A curtain was fallen, my holiest of holies was ripped apart, and new gods had to be set in their place.....A true unrest has taken mastery on me and I will not be able to calm the excited spirits until I am in your dear presence.

In Marx's poem "The pale Maiden," the lyrical voice is that of a young woman who abandons her love of Christ and meets a ghastly end. Marx wrote:

Thus heaven I've forfeited, I know it full well.
My soul, once true to God, is chosen for hell.

Marx's family clearly noticed the change in him. In an earlier letter, dated March 2, 1837, his father wrote to him: Your advancement, the dear hope of seeing your name someday of great repute, and your earthly well-being are not the only desires of my heart. These are illusions I had had a long time, but I can assure you that their fulfillment would not have made me happy. Only if your heart remains pure and beats humanly and if no demon is able to alienate your heart from better feeling, only then will I be happy.

One of Marx's daughters wrote that when she was young, Marx told her and her sisters many fairy tales. Her favorite was the meandering story of Hans Rockle, a magician who was always short of cash and had no choice but to sell off his lovely puppets to the devil. What Marx sold to the devil in exchange for his success was his very soul. As seen in the preceding examples, abandoning God and associating with Satan is a common theme in Marx's poetry. In "The Fiddler." Marx speaks via the lyrical voice:

How so! Plunge, plunge without fail
My blood- black saber into your soul.
That art God neither wants nor wists,
It leaps to the brain from Hell's black mists.
Till heart's bewitched, till senses reel:
With Satan I have struck my deal.
He chalks the signs, beats time for me,
I play the death march fast and free.

In the biography Marx, author Robert Payne wrote that the stories Marx told can be taken as allegories for his own life, and that he seemed to be knowingly acting on the devil's behalf.

Marx's soul turned to evil. In this rage against God, he saw the divine as something to be overthrown. The American political philosopher Eric Voegelin wrote: "Marx knew that he was a god creating a world. He did not want to be the creature. He did not want see the world in the perspective of creaturely existence.... He wanted to see the world from the point of the coincidentia oppositorum, that is, from the position of God.

In his poem "Human Pride," Marx expressed his will to break away from the divine and stand with it on equal footing:

Then the gauntlet do I fling
Scornful in the World's wide open face.
Down the giant She- Dwarf, whimpering,
Plunges, cannot crush my happiness.
Like unto a God I dare
Through that ruined realm in triumph roam.
Every word is Deed and Fire,
And my bosom like the Maker's own.

Marx actively rebelled against the divine. He wrote, I long to take vengeance on the One Who rules from above and "The idea of God is the keynote of a perverted civilization. It must be destroyed".

Soon after Marx died, his housemaid Helene Demuth said that, during his illness, she had observed him performing some kind of prayer ritual before a line of candles. Marx clearly believed in the supernatural.

Throughout human history, great sages taught sentient beings the way to enlightenment and laid the foundations of the world's civilizations. Jesus Christ established the bedrock of Christian civilization, and Lao Zi's wisdom is the foundation of Taoism, a central pillar of Chinese philosophy. In ancient India, Shakyamuni's teachings led to Buddhism. The origins of their wisdom are a wonder – they obtained their insights from enlightenment on the path of spiritual cultivation, not from ordinary studies.

Marx's theories referenced the work of previous intellectuals but ultimately originated from the evil specter. He wrote in the poem "On Hegel":

Since I have found the Highest of things and the Depths of them also,
Rude am I as a God, cloaked by the dark like a God.

By the specter's arrangement, Marx entered the human world and established the cult of communism to corrupt human morality, with the intention that mankind would turn against the divine and doom itself to eternal torment in Hell.

Western Experts Believe that Humans must change themselves, If the virus cannot be eliminated.

Epochtimes 16 August 2021.

A Chinese defense epidemic expert Zhang Wenhong's theory of "co-existing with the virus" has recently been criticized by the Chinese Communist Party's media community. Some scholars believe that if the CCP virus is a warning from nature, it is telling people that human being have gone too far and people must change their behavior.

At the end of July, an epidemic caused by the delta virus occurred in Nanjing Lujou airport, which spread virus to many provinces and cities in China. In reference to this, Zhang Wenhong posted a blog on 29 July: How the world co-exists with the virus, each country is making its own answer.”

The newspaper, “People’s Daily” of CCP, subsequently published an article by the Health Minister of CCP without naming names, criticising Zhang’s views, saying that humans and viruses should have a relationship: “Either the viruses die or human die, they cannot co-exist”

In fact, what Zhang said about co-existing with viruses came from Western scientists in January of this year 2021, In the Nature Scientific Magazine inquiry more than a hundred virologists and health experts around the world said that COVID-19 would be eradicated. However nearly 90% of the respondents who when asked, answered NO. they said that there is evidence that the CCP virus may become an endemic virus and continue to spread around the world.

David Heymann, the professor of Epidemiology of Infections Diseases at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, said: “The vaccines we are using now cannot prevent infection in some cases. They just ease the infection and make the disease less serious.”

Poul Hunter, a professor of medicine at the University of East Anglia in the United Kingdom, declared that the new corona virus will never disappear, regardless of whether we have a vaccine or not.

The New York Times also published an article entitled : Unable to Achieve “ Zero Infection”. How can countries learn to co-exist with the virus?

The article said that 18 months after the CCP virus outbreak first appeared, some countries were cancelled restrictions allowing vaccinated people to travel without going into isolation. Most of the regulation implemented have focused on mask wearing.

In response to the CCP's crackdown on co-existence theory, former Chinese surgeon Hee Quan told the "Voice of America" news, that the CCP's official public opinion has always been to act "politically correct," and to regard the anti-epidemic goal like aiming for an Olympic gold medals in a sport. Use it to achieve political tasks and try everything possible when competing for them.

After comparing the two different anti-epidemic models in China and Europe, Hee Quan said, comparing the pros and cons of the anti-epidemic models should not only look at the science but also at morality. The value of any modern civilized country must consider in terms of science, the CCP's long term co-existence of the virus and the aim of universal immunization.

The CCP virus has infected 200 million people worldwide and caused at least 4.37 million deaths. It has almost brought the global economy to a standstill, destroyed million of companies, and left tens of millions of people unemployed. Scholars are beginning to reflect on what this global pandemic means to mankind?

Michael T. Klare, Professor Emeritus of Peace and World Security Studies at Hampshire College, wrote in Nation magazine, "Does this plague sweeping the world represent a catastrophic turning point?.....if it is, it maybe time to reconsider the relationship between mankind and nature."

Michael mentioned that in ancient times, when disasters suddenly occurred, it was usually attributed to the collapse of a long standing dynasty or the rise of a new ruler. For example, it is widely believed that the ancient Minoan civilization in the Eastern Mediterranean collapsed after a strong volcanic eruption on the island of Thira [now known as Santorini] in the 17th century BC. Therefore, the survivors of these disasters often attribute their misfortune to the excessive and plundering anger of the gods against humans.

Michael said, If the coronavirus is a warning from nature, it is telling us that human have gone too far, and must change their behavior.

TikTok Shady: Pushing sex and drug videos to teenagers

NTD News September 11, 2021

A survey conducted by The Wall Street Journal found that the application TikTok uses specific algorithms to push drug and pornographic content to minors.

Recently, in order to understand the content displayed to underage users by the popular app TikTok , the Wall Street Journal registered dozens of bot accounts belonging to users between 13 and 15 years old. It turns out that TikTok can quickly lead minors into a bottomless pit full of sex and drug content through powerful algorithms .

For example, TikTok posted at least 569 drug videos to an account registered as being that of a 13-year-old boy. All involved cocaine and methamphetamine. TikTok also posted hundreds of Japanese movies and cartoons to another underage account, many with sex-related themes.

Sometimes, the creators of TikTok have marked videos as only being suitable for adults, but TikTok still pushes these videos to minors. Of course, TikTok pushes videos based on user preferences. So what powerful algorithm does TikTok use to gain insight into user preferences?

"Wall Street Journal" survey: "The official company claims that sharing, likes, subscriptions, and the content you have seen will determine TikTok's push to you, but we found that TikTok only needs one thing to figure you out : The time spent on each video."

The process goes roughly like this. For a new user, TikTok will recommend different types of the most popular videos, and then record the time spent on each video. In this way, in the short time of 40 minutes, TikTok can calculate a person's innermost interest, and then drag them into the pit of the corresponding content. This means Tik Tok pushes the person a massive amount of content they are interested in and follows the amount that is viewed. With the increase in content, the content pushed will also further stimulate the person's desires.

Former YouTube engineer Guillaume Chaslot said that TikTok's algorithm seems to be able to quickly find a person's weaknesses. The content it recommends may not be what they enjoy, but it is such that they can't help but open it.

This is why, as we mentioned at the beginning, minors will quickly enter a world of sex and drugs . Among TikTok's approximately 100 million monthly active users, minors account for about a quarter, making them the largest user group.

After the contents of such a push were questioned by the outside world, a TikTok spokesperson said that currently there is no distinction between content provided to adults and minors, but said that the platform is seeking to create a tool to filter content for young users.

Regarding illegal content, TikTok said in a recent report that 89 million videos were deleted in the second half of last year. But because users are uploading tens of thousands of videos every minute, administrators can only focus on the most popular content, and videos with a low number of views are basically left unscrutinised.

TikTok is actually the international version of Douyin, and its parent company is Byte Dance based in Beijing. In 2020, the former Trump administration in the United States issued a ban on TikTok and WeChat on the grounds of national security. However, the Biden administration lifted this ban in June this year.

Swedish Musician Gives Up Drugs after Practicing Falun Dafa

Sept. 17, 2021 | By He Ping, a Minghui correspondent in Sweden

(Minghui.org) Johan, a 39-year-old music producer and music engineer in Västerås, Sweden, looks happy, and relaxed, with a smile as bright as the sun. It's hard to believe that he struggled with addiction for almost 20 pain-filled years. Only those who have known Johan for a long time have witnessed how he was seemingly reborn by practicing Falun Dafa (also called Falun Gong).

Johan does the second Falun Gong exercise, the Falun Standing Stance.

Johan showed talent as a musician at a young age. He played the piano beautifully and composed music. However, when his parents divorced when he was young, he was traumatized. Influenced by friends, Johan became addicted to drugs, smoking, and alcohol as a teenager and couldn't pick himself up.

"Thinking of the past makes me feel guilty. I used to suffer a lot from my addictions and tried all kinds of ways to get off them, but nothing worked. I didn't know why life was so hard. I felt empty until one day in 2011, a friend of mine introduced me to Falun Dafa. I began to see a light in the darkness," Johan recounted.

"The first time I read the main book of the practice, Zhuan Falun, the words 'Truthfulness, Compassion, and Forbearance' jumped into my mind. I could feel an energy flow in my body while I read. Though I couldn't completely understand the book, it changed many of my incorrect notions. I was very aware that the book was teaching me how to become a good person—and that's what I wanted to do. But would I be able to? I didn't have enough confidence."

After Johan read Zhuan Falun, hope blossomed in his mind.

However, it wasn't easy to give up years of relying on drugs; it was as if they were blocking him from contacting local Falun Gong practitioners. He couldn't study the Falun teachings diligently or do the exercises on his own. It was a tough journey. He ended up spending another seven years painfully struggling along.

By the fall of 2018, Johan was exhausted. His girlfriend left him, which made things worse. Then his health went downhill.

Johan reading the main text of the Falun Dafa practice, Zhuan Falun
One day, Johan felt that he couldn't go on, that he'd reached the end of his life. A voice seemed to cry out from the bottom of his heart, "What shall I do? What shall I do?" As he begged for a way out, a thought suddenly came to him, "I want to read Zhuan Falun. I want to practice Falun Dafa." He recounted, "The moment I had this idea, all my anxieties, all my frustrations, all my fears, and all my feelings of restlessness disappeared."

With a smile on his face, Johan said, "I realize now that Master has always been protecting me. It was Falun Dafa that was the beacon of light in the darkness. Self-cultivation was my only way out. I thank Master Li very, very much!"

"I picked up Zhuan Falun again and finished reading the whole book. I found clear answers to many of the issues I was confused about. I wanted to read it again, so I continued reading for hours. The more I read, the deeper the meanings of what I read and the clearer my mind became. It unlocked my heart and gave me endless strength. I finally overcame my mental obstacles and contacted local practitioners."

Two weeks after he resumed practicing Falun Dafa, Johan easily overcame his addiction to drugs, a battle he'd fought for almost 20 years! Soon after that, he quit smoking and drinking; even his allergies were gone before he knew it.

“I personally experienced the miracle of Falun Dafa! I’m happy, full of energy, and enjoying a renewed life! Falun Dafa is so amazing!” he said smiling.

Johan also did his best to change his old ways of life and live by Falun Dafa’s principles of Truthfulness-Compassion-Forbearance. His relationships with his family, friends, and colleagues continued to improve. Those who knew him were happily surprised by his metamorphosis.

Wherever he goes, Johan always tells people about the amazing benefits of Falun Dafa. “Falun Dafa gave me the courage and strength to pull myself up when I’d reached a dead end. I’m fortunate to know Dafa. I’ll never give it up. It’s incredibly sad that people like me in China are imprisoned and even killed for their organs.”

Johan’s parents were thrilled to see him change for the better so quickly. They even found his music more beautiful than before. It was incredible to them.

His parents sympathize with persecuted Falun Gong practitioners in China. While praising the principles of Truthfulness-Compassion-Forbearance, they condemn the Chinese Communist Party for its brutal persecution of good people.

Johan wants to tell people around the world how great Falun Dafa is: “I sincerely recommend the book Zhuan Falun. It tells you how to be a good person. Falun Dafa is responsible for countless miracles. I’m one of them. If you can spend just a little time finding more about it, you will know who is righteous and who is wicked. Don’t be deceived by the Chinese Communist Party’s lies.”

World Summit Against Organ Harvesting: News Media Have Responsibility to Expose Brutality

Sept. 30, 2021 | By a Minghui correspondent Li Huirong_

(Minghui.org) After three successful events between September 17 and 19, the World Summit on Combating and Preventing Forced Organ Harvesting started its fourth session on September 24 with a theme of “Silence and self-censorship by the media regarding forced organ harvesting crimes.”

The Summit has six sessions scheduled. It was launched jointly by five NGOs, including Doctors Against Forced Organ Harvesting (DAFOH, in the U.S.), CAP Freedom of Conscience (Europe), Taiwan Association for International Care of Organ Transplants (Taiwan), Korea Association for Ethical Organ Transplants (IAEOT, South Korea), and Transplant Tourism Research Association (Japan).

Several guests spoke at the fourth session, including Maurice Droin (French economist and journalist), Marco Respinti (Italian journalist and essayist), Zoé Valdés (journalist and author), and Chang Chin-Hwa (professor in journalism).

Maurice Droin

Marco Respinti

Maurice Droin is a French economist and journalist, and he had also worked for the French Ministry of Defense. He said the live organ harvesting by the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) is a crime against humanity. But mainstream Western media had been remained silent on this issue. This happened because of the CCP's financial pressure, ideological infiltration, and wolf warrior-type diplomacy.

Droin said that twelve human rights experts from the United Nations published a report this June on organ harvesting by the CCP. The report not only confirmed the CCP's crime of organ harvesting but also found that the only so-called "crime" of the victims is that they held a different ideology than the CCP. The report was made possible thanks to the hard work of those experts, who had to overcome many difficulties to obtain evidence of organ harvesting, yet Agence France-Presse chose not to publish the report after reviewing and then self-censoring it.

While committing severe human rights violations in China, the CCP manipulates media both inside and outside China to cover up its crimes. As a result, the crime of organ harvesting remains under reported.

During his speech, Droin said, “The Chinese press censors in China is ‘normal’ since only speech validated by the Communist Party is allowed. But is it normal for the Western press to censor in countries that call themselves democratic?”

For a long time, the CCP has been infiltrating Western society through propaganda, paying media outlets money to get its articles published and in turn influence policymaking. As a result, doctors, elected officials, and lawmakers turn a blind eye to and ignore the human rights abuses in China.

Droin encourages people to pay attention to independent media such as Epoch Times and NTD, both of which aim to report uncensored news free of the CCP influence. The two media outlets’ efforts are important because “by seeking and finding the truth is salutary and you will then be able to judge the importance, or not, of preserving freedom of expression and that of the press, which is now enslaved.”

Journalists Are Watchdogs of Societ

Marco Respinti is a professional journalist and essayist in Italy, and he also serves as Director-in-Charge of the academic publication Bitter Winter, an international publication covering issues of religious liberty and human rights. “Journalism is the watchdog of democracy, constantly serving a better society,” he remarked, “This is all the more the case when journalism investigates totalitarian states, where fake news and violence are the daily bread.”

One example is the CCP, a regime that not only destroys all religions, but also detains and tortures faith groups, both physically and mentally. He said organ harvesting by the CCP has lasted for decades and the main victims are Falun Gong practitioners. Other minorities are also targeted, including Uyghurs, Tibetans, and Christians.

He said the CCP had covered up many of its crimes and even sent officials to spread lies in international forums. Take Falun Gong practitioners and Uyghurs as an example. The CCP labels them, who dare to speak the truth, as “liars.” When unable to cover their crimes up due to mounting evidence, the CCP then finds excuses to try to “justify” its actions and to avoid intervention from the international community.

Unfortunately, some journalists yielded to the CCP under pressure. By repeating lies from the CCP, they made the situation in China even worse, as the escalation of the suppression by the CCP led to more deaths. In fact, journalists cannot take the CCP’s remarks at face value. For example, although the regime claimed transplant organs came from consenting donors, the number of transplants far exceeded the number of registered donors.

“Journalists are not detectives, but through their job they can perform some measure of investigation; journalists are not detectives, but they can provide facts that detectives may somewhat use. Journalists are not even spiritual guides, but by properly doing their job, they can offer guidance that can also help to somewhat nourish the soul of people,” Respinti explained, “Let’s all wisely stay away from preaching journalists, but good journalists can at least avoid poisoning their own as well as their readers’ souls.”

As a professional journalist himself, he suggested that other journalists work to set up a resources repository of information and reports on the crime of organ harvesting. He also encouraged them to openly discuss the credibility of this information and the response by the CCP. These efforts would help end killing of the innocent lives in China.

Stop the Brutality

Zoé Valdés is a journalist, author, and cinematographer from Cuba. “I denounce, and will denounce with all my strength through my literary work and as a journalist, these crimes against dissidents who are punished, tortured, and killed for their beliefs,” she said, indicating that the majority of the victims are Falun Gong practitioners and Uyghurs, “These criminal practices must end at once.”

Zoé Valdés

Chang Chin-Hwa

She said that the CCP has committed all kinds of crimes against humanity and that it has attempted to cover them up and make people ignore or forget these crimes against humanity. Any intellectuals and journalists with conscience should condemn the CCP and urge it to stop its crimes. Taking organ harvesting by the CCP as an example. Instead of opposing the crimes, mainstream media are actually defending them. Human rights experts at the United Nations had announced they had obtained a credible report on organ harvesting by the CCP and the crime is very secretive. While reporting this news, many media would add one sentence that the CCP denied the crime.

Valdés pointed out that the CCP even barred anyone from entering China to conduct independent investigations. She said the credibility of many news media is questionable. Rather than condemning the vicious and investigating the facts, they simply repeat the CCP's lies.

In the end, she said organ harvesting is a serious crime by the CCP. When some mainstream media failed to report it, covered it up, or defended it, they function as the CCP's allies.

Duty of Free World Media. Chang Chin-Hwa, Professor at the Graduate Institute of Journalism of National Taiwan University, said forced organ harvesting by the CCP has existed for many years and it still continues. Furthermore, Falun Gong practitioners are the main source of the organs, a main finding announced by the China Tribunal in June 2019.

She said the tribunal had inquired about some China hospitals as part of its investigations, and they were told some organs were from Falun Gong practitioners. Recently, Falun Gong practitioners were found to be the main organ sources. Citing a newly released report, the Tribunal found people were killed on demand for their organs. The report claimed the CCP had committed crimes against humanity, although Beijing kept denying it.

Investigations showed the crime was top-down genocide and the motive could be financial gain. In addition, the Tribunal said Uyghurs and Tibetans may also have been particularly mistreated. Although this is a serious, major crime, hardly any mainstream news media have reported it.

Chang also cited the same UN report that Droin mentioned that was done by twelve human rights experts. She said she was shocked by the findings and saddened that there was almost no coverage of the report by mainstream media. In Taiwan, only Central News Agency had a news article published by its officer in Geneva. The article had a title of "UN Human Rights Experts Shocked: Forced Organ Harvesting Targeting Minorities in China. Beijing Renouncing Furiously."

Although the article title seemed to imply it was a balanced report, it actually discredited the findings by the U.N. human rights experts and misled readers. Chang said that the sentence “Beijing renouncing furiously” gave off the impression that the UN report may be controversial or even lacks credibility. By doing things like this, media outlets are covering up facts, allowing the crime to continue.

Chang said the problems did not come from journalists or media alone. Many scholars and China experts have found the CCP had been trading money for power in an attempt to control the world. This includes businesses, technologies, entertainment industry, publishing, academia, and news media. As a result, news media that have connections with Chinese markets are affected.

She also urged people to support independent media that stay true to their principles, such as Epoch Times and NTD Television. We have learned from history that serious human rights violations deserve close attention from news media. By uncovering the truth, we can help end the crimes sooner. She reiterated that it is the media’s responsibility to stop the CCP’s crime of trading organs for money.

In conclusion, Chang expressed hope that more media could “restore and abide by their professional ethics” and “disclose the truth so that we can stop the crimes as early as possible.”

Taiwan- Mr. Democracy

30.July.2020. The Epochtimes.

The former President of the Republic of China. [Taiwan's Kuomintang] was fighting against the communism who was steal the rule] Lee Deng-hui ages 98, passed away at the Veterans General Hospital Taiwan in 2020.

Founder of Taiwan Democracy

Born in Taiwan in 1923, his family came from Fujian, China. He became the first directly elected president in the history of the Republic of China in 1996. His term of office ended 19 May 2000 and he was hailed as Taiwan's Mr Democracy.

As a child Lee Deng-hui received a Japanese-style education in Taiwan. He graduated from Taiwan National University in 1949, and went to Japan and United States twice to study.

Lee had joined Communist Party in his youth than years later he found the book of Capitalism that Marx's described was wrong. And later he joined of Republic China and was favored by Chiang Chiang jing guo [the son of Chiang Kai-shek, the Republic leader] to entered to the political arena.

Lee Deng-hui served as mayor of Taiwan City, chairman of the Taiwan Provincial Government of the Republic of China, and was promoted by Chiang jing-guo to vice president in 1984. After Chiang jing guo died during the presidency on 13. January 1988, Lee inherited as the president of Taiwan.

Lee Deng-hui was carried on Chiang jing guo's plan to amend the Constitution in Taiwan in 1990s. That ideal was that all Taiwanese people have the right to vote to choose their leader. Lee was successfully selected as the first president of Taiwan in 1996.

He received the BBC news/ China interview in 2014 had made a rare evaluation of Xi Jinping. He said that he didn't think the CCP leader Xi Jinping could lead China to democracy. The reason given was that Xi Jinping does not have this " foundation." As well he stated Xi Jinping might want to take Mao Zedong's view and Xi has the ambition to fight for world leadership with the United States. However, the internal Chinese issues are complex and difficult to resolve, because mainland China does not have the ideological or religious freedom necessary for these issues to change. It will take time for China to become a democratic country.

Lee Deng-hui had a good observation, he said that Deng Xiaoping's the " One Country Two Systems" policy was not that simple, he predicted that not long years, Hong Kong people would be persecuted in the future. He called the Taiwan government to prepare to receive those pursuing democracy and let Hong Kong people stay in Taiwan.

Lee was mentioned that, Chiang jing-guo was sent to Moscow at age 14 by his father in the 1920s to receive a Communist Party education and years later the Soviet Union sent Chiang to a labor camp as a hostage to pressure his father. It could therefore be said that Chiang had a deep understanding the methods used by the Communist Party.

In 2018, a constitutional amendment was passed giving Xi Jinping the right to become chairman for life. When the media reported that Xi would become emperor. Lee Deng-hui said Taiwan had to maintain democracy while China tended more towards autocratic rule.

Lee Deng-hui praised the book of “ Nine Commentaries” :
Recognize the true face of the China Communist Party.

In 2005. Lee hosted a press conference concerning the urgent crisis facing two members of parliament trying to visit mainland China as union representatives. Lee Deng-hui held up the book the “ Nine Commentaries on the Communist Party” and said that people should read the book and see the true face of the CCP. He said the nature of the CCP has caused many people to quit the Communist Party after they understand the reality. Lee believes that, if CCP did not quickly democratise and liberalize, problems in Asia will become much worse.

He said this book tells us that the moral awakening of people in the world requires that they leave the communist Party immediately” and that is the true source of peace required to accelerate the disintegration of the Chinese Communist Party. it is therefore, necessary to share the philosophy of “The Nine Commentaries” on the Communist Party with rest of the world.
Mr Lee would liked to express his thanks for the efforts of the “The Epoch Times” to promote this book world-wide.
